15,000 Metres Above Time

S. C. Flynn
Independent Scholar, Ireland
scyflynn@gmail.com

DOI: https://doi.org/10.37536/ecozone.2023.14.2.4919

In the eye of the cyclone
the most important event has never taken place. Stillness holds the world in narcissistic trance:
silent greyness contemplating itself under a dead star of spider dreams in a galaxy you cannot escape.
You hold your breath without daring to whisper.
This eternity may be your last;
nature cannot die, so must suffer longest.